DEPT felt it was sufficient to suggest idea of some statement to Germans and did not feel it appropriate to press subject on Brentano during discussions in Washington.

In review of subject in preparation for Brentano visit, we noted statement in Bonn's 3362 RPTD Warsaw 153 Paris 610 London 397, that Germans ready to void decision on arming Bundeswehr if agreement reached on general disarmament. This formula appears to us on reflection to be considerable oversimplification. In point of fact, our disarmament proposals do not contemplate elimination of atomic weapons and we find it difficult to conceive circumstances under which German NATO forces would not require nuclear capability so long as such capability exists in Soviet forces. Accordingly we believe formula should place emphasis more specifically on need for weapons to counter Soviet capabilities and should make specific reference to Soviet nuclear capabilities. It occurs to DEPT that better formulation would be one in which Germans express willingness void decision on arming Bundeswehr if agreement reached on measures of general disarmament which remove requirement for such arming in face of uncontrolled Soviet nuclear and conventional capabilities. This formula would, it seems to us, be responsive to German political requirements/ ~~While this formula would emphasize the need for weapons to counter Soviet capabilities, it would~~ place emphasis correctly on need for weapons to counter Soviet capabilities.
